Rapid Evolution in Consumer Engagement and Loyalty is Driving Investor Interest

The way consumers engage with consumerfacing brands is continuously evolving, creating an opportunity for Marketers are constantly scrambling to stay in front of the latest tactics used to drive loyalty, and companies with proprietary automation tools have become a focal point for M&A. Consumer loyalty and retention programs are now "table stakes" and demand for these ROI-based marketing strategies is increasing - brands realize that loyalty can actually drive profitability and it's no longer just the cost of doing business. Personalization through the creation of a consistent, omni-channel consumer experience is viewed as the most critical output of today's loyalty programs and the companies with these capabilities are seeing significant, in-bound interest. The foundation of this "personalization" is building targeted messaging and product recommendations for consumers; however, new marketing technology platforms allow for even greater customization. Marketers are now able to provide a highly contextual offer (e.g., optimal channel, right time), so investors should take note that companies with the ability to collect and analyze customer behavioral and intent data now have a clear advantage.

The Lincoln VOG Database - Lincoln's Perspectives on the Mid-Market

About The Lincoln VOG Database:

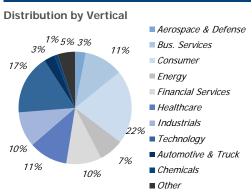

Lincoln maintains an extensive proprietary database in connection with its quarterly portfolio valuation activities by the Valuations and Opinions Group, containing financial data for a diverse group of companies across ten primary industry segments. The database offers a glimpse into the mid-market where reliable data is otherwise limited. Valuation metrics reflect observed transaction multiples. Financial results reflect information available at the end of each calendar quarter (typically, financial statements for one or two months preceding the end of the period). The database contains nearly 800 midmarket companies.
